Read the passage below carefully then answer questions 26 to 38.

Experience is the best teacher, goes the saying. Most of us firmly believe that they cannot be conned. Some do not imagine that conmen and conwomen do exist. They are fully convinced that for one to be swindled, they must be very naive. Mr. Karani, a reputable bank manager in Kenya, is a man who has travelled to almost all continents in the world. This man believed that he was very "smart."

However, he came to learn that there are "smarter" people than him in this world. As Mr. Karani was strolling along pavements in the city, he came across a small crowd of people. In the centre of the human ring stood a slender old man. In front of him was a small plastic table. Between his fingers, the old man held a red card and two other cards lay on top of the stained table. "Come one, come all. I am Professor Ting Twa. I can double your money and in no time, you find yourself twice as rich as you came. What you need to do is show me the lucky card," said the Professor. "What would be wrong if I tried my luck?" Mr. Karani asked himself. He went closer and closer and soon he was standing by the table. He dipped his hand into his pocket and fished out a ten shilling coin. The game was so easy and in no time, Mr. Karani was ten shillings richer. What an easy way of getting rich! With excitement, he ran back to the bank and withdrew all his savings and returned back to the "money doubler" seeing the bundle of notes Karani had the Professor got happier and happier, made the game even easier and soon he told Mr. Karani, "If you want to win the biggest amount, put all your money," something Mr. Karani did in a second, only to get a shock of his lifetime, he picked on a wrong card. All his money was gone. The Professor and his team vanished. Mr. Karani had lost a half a million.

CLASS 5 ENGLISH END TERM 1 2020

Read the passage below then answer questions 39 -50.

When one hears about violence, one first thinks of someone being hit by another person or throwing of objects by one person to another with purpose of causing injury. Violence however, may take forms such as insults, emotional abuse or even sexual abuse. Being told to sleep hungry is a form of violence too. The evidence in this case may not be physical but it involves being harmed by another person.

Most of the time, the person causing the violence has more power. This person may be stronger or in a position of authority. On the other hand, the victim is in a weak position and cannot defend themselves. All these types of violence can take place at home.

Domestic violence is any violence that occurs within the family. When one member of the family starts fighting and hitting another, it causes injury to all other members of the family as well. Domestic violence can take the form of the parent hitting the other parent, a child hitting another child or a parent hitting a child. In some cases, parents in a household may be violent and abusive towards each other. When children see this, it affects their relationships both at home and at school. This makes the child think that violence is the only solution to all the problems they face. The law recognizes that domestic violence is an offence. When such violence occurs, it often leads children to prisons, remand homes if crimes are committed, approved schools or even jail. Parents may also be jailed.

Another form of domestic violence is when a parent abuses drugs or alcohol. In such cases, the child may not receive the support they require and their needs may be ignored. These needs include food, clothing, shelter, education and healthcare. Children have a right to receive the best possible care from their parents or guardians. It may be difficult to sometimes understand domestic violence when it occurs. They should report it to an adult they trust or to the police when they suspect that it has occurred. This will enable both the parents and children to get the help they need. It is however important for the family to avoid all forms of violence and live together in peace. A peaceful family contributes to a peaceful nation.
