TASK II: READING ALOUD

The teacher says as he points the passage: "I would like you to read this passage aloud"

"Kazungu, I am leaving shortly to visit your aunt, Cheptoo," his mother said. "Please stay at home. Remember walking or riding down the road is dangerous."

Soon after, Orita Kazungu's friend, came along.

"Let's go cycling," said Orita".

"That's a good idea," Kazungu replied.

At first, they were careful as they rode their bicycles. Soon, they found themselves on the rough road. As they rode down the sloppy road, Kazungu lost control and hit a tree trunk. He was trapped between his bicycle and the trunk. He was seriously hurt in the leg. His friend was scared and helpless.

"How do I help him?" he wondered.

"Help! Help!" Kazungu cried.

Luckily, a man was passing by.

"Stop moving!" the man shouted.

He lifted the bicycle off the boy and gave him first aid. The man gently applied pressure on the leg to stop the pain. He then encouraged Kazungu to remain calm because his leg was not seriously hurt. From that day, Kazungu promised never to disobey his mother again.
