3.(a) Read the oral narrative below and answer the questions that follow.

Once, there lived a man, his wife and their daughter. Unfortunately, the woman died, leaving behind her husband and daughter. The man soon remarried, for he was a tradesman who had to travel far and wide for many days, and he was uncomfortable leaving his young daughter all alone. He married a woman who already had a daughter, but the woman was not the good. She made a slave out of the girl whose mother had died; hoping to work her to death, for the girl was beautiful, and there was nothing extraordinary about her own daughter. Still, be that as it may, something does not always fall where it is thrown. The girl whose mother had died was good-natured and won the hearts of the villagers.

Her stepmother often told her, “Fetch me a whole river of water, useless child!”

Whenever this happened , the girl would run to the river, for she was very obedient, just like all of you good children,eh? and all the girls in the village would run with her. They would help her fetch so much water that there would be nowhere to put more water in her home.

Her stepmother would also shout, “Dig the whole shamba, you lazy child!”

When this happened, the girl would run to the shamba, and all the boys and girls of seven villages would run with her. To help her and the work of many days would be complete before sunset. The stepmother would be furious. The two girls grew, just as you will grow, good children. It came to a time when suitors should have been asking for the girls’ hands in marriage. Do you know what strange thing happened? All the suitors were only interested in the girl whose mother had died. They were not interested in the stepmother’s daughter because she was lazy and lacked social graces. This made the stepmother even more furious, so much, so that she decided to kill her stepdaughter.

One night, she crept to where the girls slept. Unbeknownst to her, the girls had switched sleeping places because her daughter felt that sleeping near the door was better than sleeping at the back of the room. So when the cruel stepmother brought down the knife on the bed nearest to the door, she ended up stabbing her own daughter.

Dear children, evil does not pay, and if it does, it pays with evil.
