THE VILLAGE DEGREE

She was coming from the river when she noticed her primary school headteacher's bicycle leaning against the tree in front of her parent's house. Instinctively, she decided to stealthily go round the house and hide in the kitchen. She didn't want her teacher to see her in her torn and patched work dress. But the mention of Alliance Girls High School made her forget about her attire. She rushed into the house, water jerry can still on her back.

She became the heroine of the family, the village, the location and even the district. Her name appeared in the newspapers. She was the best in Kenya Certificate of Primary Education in the county and her name was on the lips of everybody. The whole family crowded around the teacher to read for them this great letter.

Even those who could not read wanted just to touch it. The letter spoke of hope and freedom from poverty and as many of the women seemed to think, free from dependence on men in their celebration. Many older women repeated in different versions their belief that with education you my daughter won't have to be a slave for a man. You will be your own master. Though Mwangeli did not understand much about what the older women meant, she was excited as they were over her apparently open path to freedom.

So Mwangeli had joined Alliance thrilled by the prospects of freedom. There she met the best brains in the country and they were all celebrating freedom from slavery. But to her surprise, the presence of visiting boys' school seemed to generate such excitement that she wondered from men.

As for Mwangeli, her mother had told her not to mix men and education. In obedience, she kept the two apart and sure enough, after four more years, yet another letter came to her and there was cause for women folk in her village to celebrate `again. The daughter had been admitted to study for a degree in Electrical engineering at the university of Nairobi, the only woman in the class of twenty. Yes, she was no longer Mwangeli she was already a village engineer. In fact, the name Mwangeli even in its form 'Ngeli' was lost. Now the focus was a degree. She was now Engineer Mwangeli'

Aren't you going to open the letter? Atieno asked, startling Mwangeli out of her reverie. 'It's not urgent' Mwangeli replied in a flat tone. 'I was just thinking how I can do this quietly you remember how the whole village hired a van to come and celebrate my masters scholarship offer? I'm usually glad to see them happy and excited but I find I have no privacy. I'd like to handle this one differently. I'll need to read the letter when I have had a rest and I'll tell you what I decide.

And with that Mwangeli put her letter in the handbag and sat down to enjoy a cup of tea and chat with her friend.
