Long before the coming of missionaries, Africans knew God and worshipped Him in many different ways. When studying African heritage, we find different creation stories but always explain the uniqueness and supremacy of man over other creatures. In the beginning, Gikuyu the founder of the tribe was called by Ngai and he was given the land that was fertile with game, rivers and ridges. Ngai then created a big mountain which he named Kirinyaga now mount Kenya. From this mountain he would come out of his rest to inspect the earth.

One day Gikuyu was summoned by Ngai who wanted to show him the wealth he had created. While on top of the mountain, Ngai showed Gikuyu a fig tree in the middle of the country. He commanded Gikuyu to descend from the mountain and establish a homestead in the chosen place which he called Mukurwe wa Gathanga.
